

The new kid on the block

Who is Back Bar Models? Back Bar Models is run by me, Rick Schreuder. Back Bar Models is the result of having some CAD skills, a source of drawings and having spent a fair bit of time maintaining and operating 12" to the foot models. It started with doing some etching for myself, which quickly grew to designing parts and kits that not only I was after, but could be used by others as well. As a result, what you see here is, with a few exceptions, mostly what ran on NZR rails around the turn of the century and after, that being my core interest. What's in a name? Back Bar has nothing to do with modelling, or railways. When I get the chance I surf and have been a Surf Lifeguard for longer than I care to remember. The back bar is the outermost bar, or place where waves break. It's where you get the biggest and best waves. Something that takes a bit of effort to make it there, but is worth it when you get to it. That's my modelling philosophy as well, and the products are intended to reflect that.

We're still pretty new, but more kits are being developed so make sure you keep an eye on the Facebook page.
